and that your hospitable city may long be the great emportum for the sale and manufacture. I hope the tobacco trade of Lonisville will larmonize all parties connected with the tobacco interest, and bring together the producer, dealer and menometurer, to protect this important egricultural staple from the extravagant toxes now levied by Congress. This is not all that to build up a great national interest for ameliorating the condition of thousands of operatives in the large efficis; to educate and clevate them; to teach them to rely on ther own exertions for a living and independence.

Those engaged in the tobacco trade will compare invortably with any branch of trade of our country for public spirit, liberality and panetuality in all their dealings.

A FRIGHTFUL MONSTROSITY.

TRIUNE, TENN., July 5, 1868,

A most surprising vircumstance oc-urred in this neighborhood last Friday, thich has created lutense excitement. which has created intense excitement. Relieving it may interest your readers, I have taken the trouble to collect the facts and visit the locality, and in order to put the truth of the matter beyond eavil, you will find appended thereto the affidavits of the gentlemen before Esquire Page, of this place. I will premise the occurrence with a short history of what is known in this community as the "Big Snake,"

About twenty-five years ago, as a Mr. Vernon was returning trom his work-drop near Lindall's unil, on the Franklin and Murfreesbore road, at the fost of large hill, it being one of the range known as the Burke hills, he saw the track of some immense serpent leading own as the Burke hills, he saw the leak of some immense serpent leading ward a large thicket on the hill-side, measured about nineteen inches noss, and seemed to press into the stas if a great weight had passed over Mr. Vernen collected the people of a neighborhood the next morning, and diarned, they made a close search for a monster, but without snecess. About a years afterward his track was again at by several men about a mile from a former place. Some five vers later.

with the was cutting a pole in a thicket of Mr. Boyd Barnes', with whom he was inving, he heard in the thicket what he supposed to be a cow or horse, and the thucket being in his cornifield, he started in to run the creature out. What was his horror on taking a few steps to see the head of the veritable lig sunke, reared about eight feet high, and gazing upon the him intently. If course he fied at the op of his speed, and did not turn to see what course he would take. A few men in lorseback went to the place, but sould only find by the broken bushes the route he took.

These circumstances, following close upon each other, greatly excited the neighborhood, and mothers became earful of lenving their little ones alone, east they should be swallowed by the errible animal. Mr. Allen described into the as thick as a large man's thigh, and soid his head was about the size of frying pan, and nearly dat.

Nothing more was seen or heard of the aike before or during the war. People upoed he had died in his den from old ge. But it remained for Messrs, W. S. tobinson and J. W. Lisle, of this place, to ateh the next glimpse of him, and it ocurred in this wise; Last Friday Messrs, taking hear the eart graph of the Burke Knobs, they awe what they supposed to be a large old stretching aeross the pike, not hinking of the improbability of a pole eing in such a locality, as the pike has large field on either side. To their survise they saw the supposed to be a large field on either side. To their survise they saw the supposed pale, when they got within sixty or seventy paces of this snakeship, and as soon as he had got bout one hundred vards into the field, not one hundred vards into the field, me two hundred vards into the field, me two hundred vards above him, he scrept did not seem to care for neir proximity, but quietly pursued his and, which lay about half way down the dil-side through the lield, until he mucto the bushes in the woots. A delegale from Culifornia objected to the proposed change.

Mr. Mullary—Du I understand the chair, then, to decide that I, who duller from the expressed vote of the chairman of the Illinois delegation, must permit his vote to be taken,
and not mine?

The President—The rule already adopted by the convention will be read by the secretary,
whose votes is so much eleaver than mine,
that the convention will better understand
than if I were to state it.

Mr. Bayard, of belowure—I understand the rule of the convention to be, that the chairunit is to announce the vote of his tickgation.

Mr. Bayard, of Belawure—I undersland the rule of the convention to be, that the chairman is to amnounce the vote of its discussion.

Mr. Bayard—Boes that involve the principle that individual members are to be here as more agents of the undorfty, and not of the telephole flav getpresent? I think not. I superso as in the House of Representatives of the numbers of the Bause of Representatives as that a unipority of a delegation should undertake to control the Individual opinions of the representatives as that a unipority of a delegation should undertake here to control the Individual opinion of any member of this convention, such delegation is no longer a representative file people if such a principle is to govern their action. It would be nothing more than a mode by which failou and personal combination may overrule public sentiment. The clerk real the rules as follows:
